

Seminar on Applying for DelPHE Funding

Development Partnerships in Higher Education (DelPHE) is a research funding project funded by DFID and managed by British Council. DelPHE supports a variety of partnerships between Higher Education Institutions enabling them to collaborate in activities linked to sustainable development and poverty reduction.

Partner institutions will work on initiatives for skills development, knowledge sharing, problem solving research and other activities that will contribute towards achieving the Millennium Development Goals. In addition to the core MDG-related areas such as health, education, gender issues and sustainable agriculture, DELPHE will also encourage projects aiming to promote science and technology in the focus countries.

General comments from the DelPHE Selection Committee show that the scheme has become highly competitive and as such only the best proposals are awarded funding. As part of British Council's efforts to increase the number of awards for Ghana, We are organising seminars in some Universities across the country. We are extending an invitation to all Research fellows to attend this beneficial seminar.
